Public Utility Commission Names New Director of Market Analysis

Zerwas brings expertise back to agency where her career began.

Austin, TX – The Public Utility Commission of Texas today announced that industry expert Rebecca Zerwas has returned to the agency to serve as Director of Market Analysis. The role, overseeing the division previously known as Competitive Markets, was vacated when Connie Corona was promoted to Chief Program Officer.

“Rebecca is well-known in the industry, in the capitol and the Austin community as a principled leader,” said PUC Executive Director, John Paul Urban, III. “Her blend of expertise and experience will be indispensable in our never-ending pursuit of a sensible regulatory end. We’re glad to have her back.”

Zerwas first joined the Public Utility Commission in 2010 as an analyst covering both the wholesale and retail electricity markets that undergird the state’s competitive electric system. She left the agency to pursue an MBA at St. Edward’s University while working on the Regulatory and Government Affairs team at NRG. She spent the past year as CenterPoint Energy’s Regulatory Manager. In 2018, she was recognized as Outstanding Young Professional in the power field by the Gulf Coast Power Association. She and her husband, John, live in Austin.
